

The Aboriginal Health Council of Western Australia (AHCWA) is the peak body for Aboriginal health in Western Australia.

Vision

Aboriginal people in Western Australia enjoy the same level of health and wellbeing as all Western Australians.

Mission

As the leading authority for Aboriginal health in Western Australia, we strive to strengthen and promote the ACCHS Model of Care, empowering Aboriginal people to achieve health equality in their communities.

Aboriginal Health Council of Western Australia

Our Member Services

We exist to support our 23 Member Aboriginal Community Controlled Health Services, to deliver comprehensive, holistic and culturally secure primary health care services to Aboriginal people and communities.

Our Members operate over 68 clinics in metropolitan, regional and remote parts of Western Australia.

What We Do

Representing the interests and needs of our Member Services, we lead and influence the development of Aboriginal health policies; build the capacity of the Aboriginal health workforce; and improve and strengthen the capacity and capability of the Aboriginal Community Controlled Health Sector (ACCHS).

Central to our work is striving to support and promote the ACCHS Model of Care, a model that is built around the delivery of comprehensive, holistic and culturally secure primary health care services for Aboriginal people and their communities.

We Exist To:

Enhance and promote the ACCHS Model of Care as best practice primary health care for Aboriginal people and communities.

Support and strengthen our Member Services to achieve excellence in service delivery.

Lead and influence the state and national Aboriginal health policy and research agenda as determined by our Members

Grow and advance the capacity and capability of AHCWA and our Member Services for long term sustainability.
